THE OPERA HOUSE DRAWING.
THE GREAT EVENT DECIDED.
Feats of Fortune, and Fancies of Dame Kismet.
From the Chicago Tribune, 25th.
Promptly at the appointed hour the great domestic were thrown open, and the crowd, filling at once the lower story and the balcony, many had come from a long distance to witness the affair so unparalled in interest and the amount at stake by anything of the kind which the world has ever witnessed. Probably two hundred of the crowd were from outside of the city. Who shall say what a vast throng of fancied the minds of the vast throng as each imagined the possibility that the great prize might be his? The poor saw in it bread, clothing, comfort and necessities which they had lost all their lives deprived them of. Those in comfortable circumstances saw visions of luxuries and extravagances of which they had only dreamed, and the rich imagined the splendored dinner to their posterity which would proceed from the possession of the prize. Still the immense preponderance of chances against each one served in many cases to keep down any shadow of confidence in the result, and some who were tempted to go, were deterred by the mental call of duty, or the fear of the loss of money against the drawing. Though many of the long list of early and beautiful pictures which constituted the entire prize were the services small fortune, the Opera House was on the lips and in the hearts of every one, over-sawing by its immensity, the lesser value. In spite of the intense excitement the best of humor prevailed, and in all parts of the house, and throughout the entire city, the buzz of conversation filled the air, all upon one subject—the great prize. Some, indeed, the weary hour with such slight stimulants as peanuts, sandy and the like, but the crowd was not dulled in any way, and the excitement and splendid castles in Spain. All this while the numbers continued to increase, and when the most desirable parts of the house were filled, the high respectability was fully filled. Opera glasses were used to bring things more clearly in view, that the slightest motion might be caught, and many doubtless looked for early signs to make the prize their own. The chief actors in the drama were J. H. Eddy, Burke, of the New York Herald, and Mr. Am-brosius, of the Philadelphia Telegraph. As the drawing progressed, messages were dispatched on the wings of lightning, and at last the many thousands of people, in all parts of the house, were eagerly leaning the list only to be disappointed. Every one had the feeling which the fishman expressed on weighing the porker, saying, "It did not weigh as much as I expected, and I never thought it would." The hall was not really so great as it might seem, for every ticket holder undoubtedly had a secret "expectation" of drawing the Opera House, and yet none thought that he should. It was a strange blending of hope and doubt, desire and disappointment.

At twenty minutes before twelve o'clock the scenes behind opened, and the two wheels were brought in and placed on the front of the stage, about two yards and a half apart. A faint burst of applause greeted the apparition, and then the gas was turned on to allow the assembly to inspect the wheels at their leisure. Five minutes more passed, and then the stationery was brought in by a solitary individual who looked very confident under the load. Save and except the two policemen at the wings, nothing more was visible for a time so long that the throng became impatient at the delay.
About five minutes before twelve the members of the committee came in, Indian file, each bearing a couple of the boxes containing the tickets.
J. H. Eddy, Esq., then advanced to the front, and said:
"GENTLEMEN AND LADIES: The committee will now deposit the numbers—each ticket, numbering from one to two hundred and ten thousand—in this wheel. They have received the tickets from the hands of the superintendents, and have not been out of their possession. They have examined and counted them and believe them to be all correct. These boxes contain five thousand tickets each, with the exception of two, which contain ten thousand each." Mr. Eddy then took the box containing the first five thousand and attempted to pour the tickets into the wheel. Several of them fell to the ground, and were gathered up by the committee very carefully. After that a few others spilled, at intervals, but without creating disorder.

This process occupied but about twenty minutes, past twelve, and then Mr. Eddy announced that there was in that wheel 210,000 tickets—one out of every certificate sold. The lid was closed, and then Mr. Eddy took a smaller box containing the 302 prizes and emptied them into the lower wheel, which was then closed, and Mr.
Eddy explained that the wheel and its prizes spilled, at intervals, but without creating disorder.

Two men then advanced to the wheel and commenced turning. The wheels were revolved slowly for a short time, till every body was satisfied that the wheels were complete. The two beings on whose movements hung the destinies of thousands were named Peter Peterson and Emil Reiske.
At thirty-two minutes past noon W. F. Coolbaugh, Esq., took the wheel and, in behalf of the committee, he authorized him, in behalf of Mr. Crosby, to state that there were remaining uncollected somewhere about twenty-five or thirty thousand tickets, and that the 210,000 tickets then in that box represented from 25,000 to 30,000 tickets which belonged to Mr. Crosby. This gentleman stated to the committee that it was impossible for him to give the exact number sold, in consequence of the absence of official returns from agents in the New York, Boston and Philadelphia. He had given that the approximate number of those unsold, and he had no doubt that the audience would believe that. Mr.
Coolbaugh then said in the power to give an exact statement of the facts. The speaker was anticipated on behalf of the committee to state that in consultation among themselves the committee had thought it expedient to designate from among their number a number of the committee should do the drawing, but this question has been decided to submit to the audience, and say that if the audience saw fit to designate two persons from their midst to appear on the stage and draw the prizes, it would meet the cordial approval of the committee.

There greeted the announcement and cries of "The committee!" "Let the committee appoint!" etc. Somebody called out for Mr. Dore, but no other name was mentioned, and Mr. Eddy announced that he was determined to be the wish of the audience that the committee should designate.
Cheers and cries of "Go ahead!" Mr. Coolbaugh then said he also desired to announce in behalf of the committee that it would be impossible for them to announce to the audience the names of the successful drawers; all they could do would be to announce the numbers.
Cries of "Shake up the tickets," "Sit them up," etc., were now heard all over the house, and in response thereto the wheels were turned again.
Mr. Eddy then proposed to the audience to appoint a committee to look into the wheels.
The only response was, "Go on with the drawing!" "Go ahead!"
Mr. Eddy then announced that John C. Dore, Esq., President of the Board of Trade, would draw the tickets out of the big wheel, and Edward F. Eddy, Esq., would draw out the prizes.
These gentlemen advanced to the work, stripped off their coats and rolled up their sleeves, and much cheering and some calls from the audience.

The excitement at this point was intense—Calls to turn the wheel thoroughly, to turn the tickets out to begin to proceed slowly, to let down, etc., were numerous and almost deafening. At last, however, order was restored, and Mr. Eddy opened the lid in the large wheel at 12:45, when Mr. Dore pulled out the first ticket No. 15,166 and called it Mr. Eddy, of St. Louis, who read it off to the audience; the prize was a new suit of clothes.

The question of ownership is not yet satisfactorily settled, though we believe that the chances are in favor of Mr. A. H. Eddy, of Prairie Du Rocher, Randolph county, Illinois. The committee examined the books but declined to make an official statement. The ticket was sold in August last. Mr. Eddy is somewhat of a gambler, and has been known to lose some two or three thousand dollars. He was a miller, and more recently a retail merchant. He was telegraphed to last evening to inform him of his good fortune, and requested to go to the drawing. He was from St. Louis, and he had been in the "Yo Semite Valley." Washington Irving and the "Friends" and seven other paintings. Mr. Kinney drew three prizes; he is believed to have been a large ticket holder, as he sold a great many and took a commission in tickets.
Stephen H. Eddy, Esq., held two hundred tickets and drew no prize. No. 150—"A Rocky Coast" —was drawn by the "Pork Packers' Club"—500 members.

AM. News.

Mr. Alexander Smith, well known as author of "The Life of George Washington," died at Washington, D.C., on January 24, after a long illness. He was born in 1792, and was a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. His work on the life of Washington is one of the most valuable contributions to American history.

The scheme for a Kentucky State army of ten thousand men, introduced in the Legislature at Frankfort, by ex-Governor Helm, was voted down by the Senate last Saturday.

A woman in Caldwell, Michigan, asked for a divorce from her husband because he refused to wear a watch.

Some of the boys at Russian public schools at Moscow, St. Petersburg, and Kiev, have been sent to the United States to study.

"Jinks, I am going to raise your rent," said a landlord to a tenant. "Thank you," said the tenant, "I am going to raise your rent."

Thodore Parker, a young man who grew suddenly ill, but who was not ill at all, was cured by a simple remedy.

"Pray, Miss C," said a young gentleman to a young lady, "how do you like the new dress?" "I like it," she replied, "but I don't like the new dress."

A woman was convicted at Richmond some time since, on a charge of stealing wearing apparel belonging to a married lady, and was sentenced to imprisonment.

An old minister enforced the necessity of defence of opinion by argument. "If every body had been of my opinion, they would have wanted my old woman," said one of the audience.

In Harlem, Holland, an ornament of white lace and board, hung outside of the street door, told of the birth of a child; and for six weeks after a birth, while the bridge is visible, no tax collector or creditor is allowed to demand payment.

In Troy a man named Taber paid $50 to secure the influence of a man named C. in obtaining a nomination for the office of Acting Superintendent of the Post. He was not nominated, and in view of the fact that he had paid $50 to get the nomination, he was not nominated.

On ground that such a use of money was in violation of public policy.
